Review of MFA Results
A. A., General Business
Department of General Business

The Department of General Business Associate of Arts Degree Program is assessed through the achievement of three major goals. These goals provide the department with an indices of how well it provides services to students. The results of the 1998-99 SLU Exit Survey indicate that the Department of General Business has met or exceeded each of the three goals defined by the department.

The first goal of the department is to provide students with a general body of knowledge representative of the current field of business. This goal is measured by evaluating students' satisfaction with quality of instruction, the department, and overall degree program. Three indicators of quality of instruction are questions that ask students how satisfied they are with the quality of instruction in advanced courses, with the quality of instruction regarding standards and ethics in their field, and with the effectiveness of faculty as teachers. The department exceeded expectations on all three of these questions. The results show that, of the student surveyed, 88.2% are satisfied with instruction in advanced courses, 87% are satisfied with the quality of instruction regarding standards and ethics in the business field, and 91.3% are satisfied with the effectiveness of faculty as teachers. Further, 91.3% were satisfied with the overall quality of their degree program and 95.7% were satisfied with the overall quality of the department.

The second goal of the department is to foster positive educational experiences and interpersonal interactions for students. Members of the Department of General Business understand that this goal is important because many students chose Southeastern because of its reputation of knowing students by name rather than number. The second goal is measured by evaluating students' satisfaction with interaction with faculty members, other support personnel, and the opportunity to work with other students. Students' satisfaction with faculty members is measured by perceived interest shown by faculty regarding academic development (82.6%), friendliness and helpfulness of faculty members (87%), and help/encouragement received from faculty members with regard to further educational opportunities (82.6%). Next, the office support staff members are important in assisting students with a variety of needs. Ninety-two percent of students reported that they were satisfied with the friendliness and helpfulness of the office staff. Finally, by allowing students to collaborate on class projects with other students, faculty members help foster friendships and collegiality. Ninety-one percent of students surveyed believed they had opportunities to collaborate with other students on class projects.

The third goal of the department is to enhance and utilize the physical and technological infrastructure of the department. Implementing this agenda not only helps to ensure that students are satisfied with their learning environments but also prepares them for the technologically advanced workplace. Many students attend Southeastern because of its reputation of having smaller class sizes. Of the students surveyed, 95.6% were satisfied with the size of classes in their major. Along with class size, the availability of facilities and technology help students in their educational studies and also gives them experience applicable to their chosen career. The results show, of the student surveyed, 82.6% were satisfied with the appropriate use of technology in the classroom, 69.5% were satisfied with the availability of computer resources for courses in their major, and 87% were satisfied with the facilities and other equipment used that related to their major.
